

Scott Darragh

Scott Darragh has been an economist with the Office of Revenue and Tax Analysis (ORTA) in the Michigan Department of Treasury since 1999. His work includes providing revenue and legislative analyses on many parts of Michigan's tax system. Prior to ORTA, Scott worked as a tax policy advisor for the Michigan House of Representatives and as a pension analyst for two Detroit-area benefit consulting firms.

From 2004 -2012, Scott was an adjunct lecturer in economics at the University of Michigan - Flint where he taught over 30 courses. In 2014, Scott was elected to the Board of Education for St. Johns Public Schools.

He received his B.A. from the University of Michigan - Dearborn, his M.A. from Wayne State University, and his Ph.D. from Michigan State University. Scott and his wife, Kendel, have two daughters, ages 14 and 8.